Braydon is a civil litigator who primarily practices in commercial litigation and tort defense.

Braydon was born and raised in Phoenix before attending the W.A. Franke Honors College at the University of Arizona, where he received his Bachelor of Science in Public Health with an emphasis in Health Systems Theory and Practice along with a minor in Biochemistry. While in college, Braydon was involved in various community outreach programs and helped facilitate mentoring organizations throughout the university, strengthening his passions for community-building and advocacy. Braydon continued his education at the University of Arizona, obtaining his law degree from the James E. Rogers College of Law. Throughout law school, Braydon engaged in a variety of legal experiences including serving as a Managing Editor for the Arizona Law Review, acting as the Health Law & Policy Fellow for Professor Tara Sklar, representing the school on the National Environmental Law Moot Court Team, and serving the community through the Education Advocacy Clinic and International Human Rights Advocacy Workshop.

In his free time, Braydon enjoys spending time with family and friends, going to the movies, and listening to podcasts.
