

Construction Litigation

Construction and residential and commercial development is a complex industry involving the interplay of various contractual agreements, regulatory agencies, and potential exposure to tort liability. With so many competing interests in play, construction projects all too often result in litigation. The attorneys at our firm have experience representing construction companies and builders, including homebuilders, in litigation involving a broad range of cases, including matters involving:

- Products liability
- Personal injury
- Contractual disputes
- Disputes among owners, contractors, subcontractors, vendors, and consultants
- Condominium rights.
