Toxic Torts

Thorpe Shwer attorneys are well-equipped to defend companies involved in complex toxic tort cases. We have represented corporate clients in state and federal courts at every phase of the litigation. Our work includes defending cases involving allegations that exposure to a client's product caused cancer, organ diseases, and other chronic or acute injuries. We understand that these cases often depend on a thorough investigation into the claimant's history, retaining experienced and credible experts, and challenging attempts to impose liability through questionable scientific methods. Our experience with the science, medicine, and legal elements of toxic tort claims enables us to aggressively defend our client's interests through pre-suit investigations, discovery, trial, and appeal.
